the State fair ground, and then followed closely behind, thus giving the country folk the chance to see the "greatest combined shows" of the country.

The temperance people of Jackson were greatly disturbed yesterday when it was announced that wine would be served at the Taft banquet. The city is "dry" but the "wets" imported their liquor from New Orleans and carried the day. The "drys" threaten to carry the matter to the people on the next election. The President himself does not election. The President himself does not drink, but other members of his party were not unwilling to accept the hospitality of the Jacksonians.

Former Governor Vardaman, who has made many bitter attacks on President Taft in his campaign for the Senate, called upon the Chief Executive and the greeting received was cordial in the extreme. The two men parted with great show of friendship.

The negroes at Jackson claimed to be show of friendship.

The negroes at Jackson claimed to be greatly 'niffed' at the President and refused to deliver an address of welcome, claiming he had refused to appoint negroes to office in Mississippi. While the appointment of Marshall is regarded as more likely, the outburst of protest on the part of the Democrats has been such that the governor may

Council, in an appropriate address, welcomed the grand council officers. Grand Regent Britt responded.

Ouray Council was congratulated on its substantial progress during the year, and for the class of candidates initiated during the evening. Grand Regent Britt made an interesting address on the fraternal features of the Royal Arcanum, and Grand Orator Harry G. Lenz read a paper entitled "Is There Hope for the Man Over Forty Years of Age?"

Accompanying Grand Regent Britt were Grand Vice Regent Charles J. James, Grand Orator Harry G. Lenz, Past Grand Regents J. Ed Swaine and Edward B. Eynon, Grand Secretary Benjamin White, Grand Treasurer George W. Copenhaver, Grand Chaplain S. I. Bessellevre, Grand Guide Glendie B. Young, Grand Sentry Isaac S. Childis, and Deputy Regents Harry C. Scott, William I. Buckley, and N. Zittell. The supreme council, the governing body of the Royal Arcanum, was represented by Claude R. Zappone, a member of the committee on council work; and Messrs. Arthur E. Cook and John L. Beatle, supreme representatives.

Columbus, Miss., Nov. 2.—Reaching Columbus nearly on schedule time, President Taft and his party were greeted for the seeming prosperity of their State and entertaining and pleasing speech. He congratulated his audience on the seeming prosperity of their State and the general lack of discontent all over the country. The greatest lesson, the project is the same, "In respect to the ambitions of the country is fully and completely united under the one flag again.

"In respect to the ambitions of the people it is the same," he said. "Everyone is proud to be a citizen of the town, after listening to the Americans and to rejoice and then god that the starry flag waves over is, a united country."
